

Tied and True

Bring onboard all you want—and more—the next time you head out on your Sea Ray, and let BuoyRope eliminate the hassle. The BuoyRope's two-in-one method surpasses traditional ropes and bungee cords with a safer, more secure way to tie up your Sea Ray or strap down water toys and other items while underway. Simply loop the BuoyRope through itself to fasten to a point of contact, and then use the provided military-grade steel S-clips to link any items to one or more of the rope's additional loops. The fast, easy and versatile system also makes it a breeze to tie up to your neighbor's boat while out on the water. "There's nothing like it for mooring and boat-to-boat chaining," says Jeff Dahl, president of BuoyRope. For more information on BuoyRope and the land-based LoopRope, visit www.looprope.com.

Do it WHITE

White has long been associated with the nautical lifestyle. From gleaming Sea Ray yachts to sugar-sand beaches and stylish boating apparel, white says simple elegance. TT Custom Marine has followed this time-tested trend by offering its PlasDECK E-Series boat decking with white lines. The synthetic teak decking made of a flexible, PVC-based compound withstands the elements and easily washes clean with a pressure hose. With no oiling, varnishing, scraping or sanding required, you're free to enjoy the warm, classy look that the PlasDECK E-Series adds to your Sea Ray. The option of white lines has become more popular this year, according to Travis Tea, president of TT Custom Marine. "The white lines give any boat a clean and classy look," he says. "It's also a nice complement to sport boats or vessels with dark-blue hulls." For more information on the PlasDECK E-Series, visit www.ttcustommarine.com.
